

It has always been Pennsylvania Business Central's pleasure to welcome the new year by honoring 100 organizations in our readership that continue to strengthen our region's B2B marketplace.

Once again, we saw a record amount of nominations come in from every corner of our readership throughout all 23 counties. While this makes it harder for us to decide on the final 100, it lets us rest easy in knowing that the final list better represents the businesses serving our readership.

This year's Top 100 Organizations are leaders in their chosen fields, bringing new ideas, technology and services to their counties and spheres of influence. With the unpredictability of various markets and the ever-changing fiscal stability of our country, these organizations have shown that smart business practices and shrewd decision-making can make all the difference in surviving unforeseen obstacles. They are examples of not only survival in difficult times, but of excelling through adversity.

It is worth noting that our nominees flow in from all three of our publications, The Pennsylvania Business Central, Women in Business, and The Marcellus Business Central. This diverse readership provides excellent backdrop for nominations each year.

We are sometimes asked how these featured companies are ranked. The answer is simple; they are not. The organizations appear in this publication in no order because we feel each one is as important as the next. Some of the organizations that appear on the list are legacy companies whose names you will most certainly have seen before while some of the brand-new upstarts appearing on the list have already had a significant impact on the B2B communities in our readership.

We would like to congratulate each of the organizations on the pages that follow. It is our hope that you enjoy reading about them as much as we've enjoyed profiling their accomplishments in the B2B world and in the communities in which we live.

Concurrent Technologies Corporation

*Concurrent Technologies
Corporation*

Concurrent Technologies Corporation and its affiliates, Enterprise Ventures Corporation and CTC Foundation, have enjoyed a year of significant technical achievements, enhanced leadership and new and renewed partnerships. As an independent, nonprofit, applied scientific research and development professional services organization, CTC solves challenging problems for our clients and provides customized solutions that impact the full lifecycle and make the world safer and more productive.

This past fiscal year, CTC earned an Outstanding Technical Achievement award for a potentially game-changing approach to ammunition manufacturing. The company also earned several patents, trademarks and licenses for its unique and high-level work and formed new strategic partnerships to expand their current capabilities, including creating the opportunity for the U.S. Navy to build critical components with 3D manufacturing.

CTC's commitment to go above and beyond applies not only to its business clients but to friends and neighbors in the community. During the 2018 fiscal year, CTC Foundation contributed approximately $132,000 to community charitable organizations. Employees personally help those in need by organizing and participating in a "Deck the Halls" contest that collects money for local food pantries, a Light the Night Walk team that raises money for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society and other activities.

CTC remains grateful for its employees, board members, clients and partners and their commitment to technical excellence and for their support as CTC strives to fulfill its role as an outstanding corporate citizen.