

Concurrent Technologies Corporation Earns Awards from National Safety Council for Second Consecutive Year

Awards recognize the safety culture that employees and management have incorporated into their workplace ethos and project planning

For the second year in a row, Concurrent Technologies Corporation's (CTC's) employees have been recognized by the National Safety Council for two milestone achievements in safety. CTC was presented with the Perfect Record Award for working 1,174,070 hours between January 1, 2015, and December 31, 2015, without a lost-time accident. In addition, the National Safety Council presented CTC with the Million Work Hours Award for the same period and total hours. Both of these awards celebrate the safety culture that CTC employees and management have incorporated into their workplace ethos and project planning.

“All CTC employees should be proud of this accomplishment because without their commitment to working safely and to looking out for the other person, such achievements would not be possible,” said Mark Parseghian, CTC’s Principal Risk Management Lead. “All levels within the organization, from the most recent hire to the President and CEO, foster a proactive safety climate.

“Leading these efforts are CTC’s Safety professionals, the Environmental Health and Safety Committee, and the Safety Committee,” Mark continued. “However, without the daily actions and safety awareness of each employee, CTC would not be in line for such recognition. We don’t do the things we do to be safe. We are safe because of what we do.”

June is National Safety Month

As we celebrate our success as recognized by the National Safety Council, we must remain vigilant in our daily work practices and consciousness of safety. We must continue to look out for the other person and remember to say something if we see an unsafe practice.
