

Concurrent Technologies Corporation Earns National Safety Council Award

2016 Safety Committee Award – First Place

Concurrent Technologies Corporation (CTC) has won the 2016 National Safety Council (NSC) Safety Committee Award, out of the more than 400 eligible members of the Affinity Insurance Ltd. Captive Insurance Program*.

CTC's Safety Committee earned first place in this newly created award based on its extensive work to create a world-class safety culture. The Committee includes participation from all levels and business areas of the company.

The Committee's primary goal is to foster employee and management engagement in safety consciousness through ongoing visible activities and communications. Each year, the group distributes a variety of outreach articles and messages for employee education.

In addition to the more routine methods of communication, the Committee promoted National Safety Month in June through CTC's Third Annual Safety and Security Day, which featured many hands-on activities and contests such as fire extinguisher training, first aid demonstrations, spot the hazards in the 'Cube of Violations,' and a virtual booth for employees who could not attend in person.

"The Safety Committee's work has had a great impact at CTC," said Mark Parseghian, CTC Principal Risk Management Lead. "Not only has the company received both the NSC Perfect Record and Million Work Hours awards in 2014 and 2015, we had a reportable injury and illness-free 2015 and a strong record of employee involvement in self-inspections and safety suggestions."

Affinity Insurance Ltd. is a member-owned heterogeneous group captive, involving more than 400 companies that meet criteria such as management commitment to safety, a better-than-average loss experience, a compatible business philosophy, etc.*
