“The publication excellence competition matched our Company against well-known, outstanding organizations including major corporations, universities, and healthcare institutions. We are pleased to be recognized in light of the great respect we have for the various companies to which we were compared,” says Mary Bevan, CTC’s Director, Corporate Communications and Brand Marketing. “Eight national awards in six years speak to our level of excellence with this publication and of our staff who support this project, which has remained the same each year.”

“Exceptional teamwork and talent bring the annual report together. Everyone contributes in some way, and our entire Corporate Communications group shares this honor with the entire CTC family,” said CTC’s President and Chief Executive Officer, Edward J. Sheehan, Jr. “I am proud of this recognition of teamwork, creativity and the relentless pursuit of excellence.”

“Our Communications group leads this effort and various parts of the Company support the gathering of information and details that makes the final product comprehensive and a pleasure to read. As a group, we are passionate about communicating the CTC story, and it’s that passion that makes our annual report stand out,” Bevan concludes.
